

Help for Trident University Students:

ACCESSING ARTICLES FROM THE TOURO COLLEGE LIBRARIES

WHY USE TOURO COLLEGE LIBRARY?

- ✗ ProQuest doesn't have everything
- ✗ Particularly not full-text sources for key journals (e.g. Sage Publications)
- ✗ Long links look like connections, but often don't work
- ✗ But TC Library has a fuller collection
- ✗ Easy to access, but has to be done right
- ✗ Largely unfamiliar – hence, this guide
- ✗ NOTE: This guide is not really about SEARCH, but just about RETRIEVAL of sources that you already have – other search guides are also available

Below the header, there are navigation links for 'Resources by College' and 'Coursenet'. A central graphic shows a globe with the letters 'TUI' overlaid. To the right of the globe is a list of resources: 'Colleges', 'WebFeat', 'eBrary', 'Net Library', 'ProQuest', 'EBSCOWeb', 'JSTOR', 'ACM Digital', and 'Science Direct'. Further right is a 'COLLEGES' box listing: 'College of Business Administration', 'College of Health Sciences', 'College of Information Systems', and 'College of Education'. Below the graphic is a 'Welcome to the TUI University Cyber Library' section with a paragraph of text and a navigation bar containing links for 'e-journal collections', 'databases', 'web links', 'e-book collections', and 'e-format reference'. Below this is an 'E-Journal Collections' section with a paragraph of text and a list of important facts to keep in mind.

Welcome to the TUI University Cyber Library

Welcome to the TUI on-line library. The cyber resources on its virtual shelves include e-journal collections, website links, e-book collections and traditional reference resources in e-format. Use the links below for more information:

E-Journal Collections

By far the most vigorous and extensive section of the TUI library is the e-journal collection. For most students the collection will be the most frequently accessed resource. In the broadest terms, an e-journal collection is a database that indexes and holds articles on a given subject. A collection may be general in scope (ProQuest-academic research) or specific in focus (Cinahl-nursing). Collections have two main components—the indexing function, the lens through which the collection is accessed and examined—and the e-journals themselves, the electronic versions of the subscribed periodicals. TUI has chosen some of the collections for the thoroughness of the index, some for the variety of formats of the holdings, and some for the depth and variety of the periodicals held. Perhaps the most important facts to grasp in researching e-journal collections are these:

THERE IS NO ONE INDEX OF ALL THE E-JOURNAL DATABASES.
THEREFORE, NO ONE DATABASE HOLDS ALL OF THE ANSWERS.
CONCOMITANTLY, ALMOST ALL DATABASES OVERLAP IN SOME AREAS.

Therefore, the following are important ideas to keep in mind:

- The student must search all databases concerned with a certain topic, because different databases may index different periodicals on the same subject.
- Databases differ not only in the periodicals that they index, but also in the formats in which they hold those periodicals (abstract, full-text, illustrations).
- A database may not hold the full-text of all articles that it indexes. In fact, the indexing function is often much more extensive than holdings within the collection. The vigorous indexing allows the student to be aware of the scholarly activity on a certain
